Personal

During the past few months Commonweal editors have participated in a number of extra-curricular activities. Here is a partial list.

Editor Edward S. Skillin gave a talk on the interracial question at the headquarters of the Catholic Worker. A few weeks later he presented a Citation to Jacques Maritain on behalf of the Notre Dame Club of Northern New Jersey.

Executive Editor John Cogley spoke at the Midwest Regional meeting of the Catholic Press Association and gave a formal lecture at Notre Dame University just before leaving for the Holy Land. Along with Harold Fey of the Christian Century and Rabbi Morris Lazaron of the Jewish Newsletter he reported on his trip to the Middle East, at meetings held in Washington and Chicago and spoke on the same subject before the Overseas Press Club in New York and at a luncheon meeting during the annual convention of the American Friends of the Middle East in New York.

During the past semester Managing Editor James O'Gara taught four courses at Fordham, filling in for a professor of sociology who was doing special studies in Europe. Mr. O'Gara also addressed a regional gathering of CIO officers, an Eastern Catholic Press Association meeting, and the combined Newman Clubs of Hofstra and Adelphi colleges.

Assistant Editor William Pfaff spoke before the student body of Marymount College on the general subject of the Catholic's responsibilities as a citizen and later returned to participate in a panel of journalists on the influence of the press on public opinion. William Clancy, Assistant Editor, addressed groups at Manhattan College and recently returned from a short speaking tour in the Eastern states during which he participated in several public discussions of the UN.
